The players included in the motion capture study are: Diego Costa, PSG and Brazil Ever Banega, AS Roma and Spain Nicolas Otamendi, Man City and Argentina Cristiano Ronaldo, Juventus and Portugal Eden Hazard, Real Madrid and Belgium Sergio Ramos, Real Madrid and Spain Marco Verratti, PSG and Italy Wesley Sneijder, Inter and Holland FIFA 20 Introduces PlayerID and AI Improvements FIFA

20 introduces PlayerID, a feature that creates accurate, unique player animations and game dynamics, and improves the player AI. The PlayerID feature also includes the ability to completely replace real players with perfectly simulated player models. When using the PlayerID system, the new player model is brought into the game and then players have to choose whether they want to use the old player or the new player. The new player is created by using motion capture data that is collected from the new player. The new player is then capable of being tracked through a variety of real-world attributes such as speed, acceleration and mobility. The player's attributes are also adjusted based on how the player moves, whether he/she is a winger or a defender or goalkeeper.

The new player also receives a tailored, individual skill set where every attribute is perfectly calibrated to be able to replicate the player's speed, acceleration, mobility, reaction time, balance and the player's individual attributes. The PlayerID system also enables the use of completely new animations for all players and new animations for all skill categories and roles. This also includes including multiple animations for different positions and specific movements. The PlayerID system and AI is already implemented in FIFA 20 Ultimate Team, which is currently available for the Xbox One console and PC. New Features for FIFA Ultimate Team FIFA Ultimate Team features a new "My Legends" mode where players can create their own football legends with a range of customizations, including custom kits, players and even goals. The players can also save their favorite legends for quick access later on. The Premier League in-game video and stats will also feature a new player model and stats. FIFA Ultimate Team now includes a new Skill Demonstration tool, which allows players to check how their custom made skill skills will behave on the pitch and see how their club's players will perform.
